

QASSP LEARNING

EXPLORING THE INQUIRY MINDSET

CULTIVATING CULTURES OF CURIOSITY WITH
TREVOR MACKENZIE AND JESSICA VANCE

WHAT YOU WILL LEARN

In this highly engaging offering, internationally recognised inquiry experts Trevor MacKenzie and Jessica Vance will challenge you to rethink the role of the teacher and the learner in the inquiry classroom.

You will be guided through activities that can be immediately applied to your practice, with specific constructivist frameworks, structures, and protocols that help students, teachers, and school leaders to adopt an inquiry mindset as their own.

OUTCOMES

- ✓ Understand the types of inquiry and how these lead to a gradual shift of control over learning from the teacher to the learner.
- ✓ Know how to cultivate classrooms of curiosity.
- ✓ Mindfully support learners in inquiry by honing the skills, understandings and structures necessary to be successful in this new learning ecosystem.
- ✓ Facilitate exercises and classroom conversations so students take on a more authentic role in the assessment process.
- ✓ Manage meaningful conversations with parents to help support students in their transformation.

TREVOR MACKENZIE | PRESENTER

Trevor MacKenzie is a passionate educator, author, and inquiry consultant who has worked in schools on five continents. His graduate research identified ways to remove the barriers when implementing inquiry-based learning. An award-winning English teacher he knows how to ensure learners are ready to take on important roles in the 21st century. He believes that it is a magical time to be an educator.

JESSICA VANCE | PRESENTER

Jessica Vance is an international educator with a passion for learning that stems from the students themselves, helping them find inspiration in their natural curiosity. In her latest book, "Leading with a Lens of Inquiry", Jessica outlines the ways in which leaders support and facilitate teachers in the same ways in which we want teachers to engage with learners.
